

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

A semiconductor device having a novel spacer structure and method of fabrication. The present invention describes a semiconductor device which has an electrode with a first thickness. A silicide layer having a second thickness is formed on the electrode. A sidewall spacer which is formed adjacent to the electrode has a height which is greater than the sum of the thickness of the electrode and the thickness of the silicide layer.

0070350" 57645350